A walkthrough for Assessors on the ATOP Pearl Awards portal — the Third-Party Independent Committee (3PIC), who score every validated entry against its criteria and decide, between you, which entries become finalists.

Portal: tourismofficersph.com

Screenshots are from a preview build while the scoring round is being rolled out. The entries, categories, and copy in them are samples for illustration and may differ from the final content.

1. Getting your assessor access

You cannot request to be an assessor — an ATOP administrator appoints you and assigns the award categories you will score. You don't need to set anything up.

If you already have a portal account, the admin can grant the role to it directly. If you don't, register first at tourismofficersph.com/register, verify your email, and give the admin the address you signed up with.

Once you've been appointed, sign out and sign back in so the new role takes effect, and a Scoring section appears in your dashboard.

2. Your scoring queue

Scoring lists every entry waiting for you: the entries in your assigned categories that have passed validation. Entries still being reviewed aren't there — you only ever see work that has cleared the compliance stage.

The screenshot shows the 'atop' Member Portal. The left sidebar contains navigation links: 'MEMBER PORTAL', '3PIC', 'APPLICANT' (with 'Overview' and 'My Entries'), 'SCORING' (with 'Scoring' selected), 'Award Categories', and 'Profile'. At the bottom of the sidebar is a 'BACK TO MAIN SITE' link. The main content area is titled '3PIC · SCORING' and 'Scoring queue'. It includes instructions: 'Score each validated entry in your categories against its rubric. Open an entry, rate every criterion 0–5, then submit — your scoresheet locks once submitted.' A progress bar shows '3 of 4 scored' and '1 still to score'. Below this are filters: 'Search title or LGU...', 'Still to score' (selected), 'All categories', 'All levels', and '1 shown'. A section header 'MUNICIPALITY' indicates '0 of 1 scored'. A table lists entries with columns: '#', 'ENTRY', 'LGU', 'MY SCORESHEET', and 'SUBMITTED'. The table contains one entry: '#1 San Vicente Handwoven Abaca Slippers' (Best Tourism Souvenirs (Non-Food)) from 'San Vicente, Ilocos Sur'. The 'MY SCORESHEET' column shows a 'To score' button. The 'SUBMITTED' column shows 'Jul 28, 2026' and a right arrow.

The list is grouped by bracket — the contest an entry actually competes in, which is its LGU level: Province, Highly Urbanized City, Component City, or Municipality. Categories that aren't judged by level (an individual, or an officers' organisation) have a single group covering all entrants. It's worth working through one bracket at a time: an entry is only ever compared with the others in its own group, so scoring them together keeps you calibrated against the right field.

The bar at the top tracks your progress, and each row shows where your scoresheet stands — To score, In progress, or Scored. The list starts filtered to Still to score; switch it to Scored or All assigned to look back at what you've done. Opening an entry opens it in a new tab, so your place in the queue is kept.

3. What you're looking at

An entry opens as a single scoresheet. It leads with the entry video, then the executive summary — the applicant's own account of the work.

Below that comes one card per criterion, each carrying the narrative the applicant wrote against that criterion and the evidence they attached to it. At the foot of the sheet are the declaration and the LCE endorsement.

That's deliberately everything you need and nothing you don't: whether the entry filed the right paperwork is the validators' job, already done before it reached you. Your job is the merit of what's in front of you.

4. The rating scale

Every criterion is rated from 0 to 5, in steps of 0.2 — so 4.4 and 4.6 are both available to you, and the scale is finer than a simple one-to-five. Open Rating scale at the top of the sheet for the descriptor bands from the Guidelines Manual.

Rating	Band	What it means
4.2 – 5.0	Excellent	Complete, well-documented, highly relevant, innovative, measurable, and clearly superior.
3.2 – 4.0	Very Good	Strong and mostly complete, with clear evidence and only minor gaps.
2.2 – 3.0	Good	Meets the basic requirements but with moderate gaps in evidence, scale, or results.
1.2 – 2.0	Fair	Partially meets the criterion but lacks clarity, depth, documentation, or measurable impact.
0.2 – 1.0	Weak	Minimal evidence or weak connection to the criterion.
0	Not demonstrated	No relevant evidence provided.

Criteria are not worth the same. Each carries its own points — you'll see them on the card, for example 20 pts — and your rating converts to points as rating ÷ 5 × the criterion's points. So 4.4 on a 20-point criterion earns 17.6. Rate the criterion on its own merits; the arithmetic takes care of the weighting.

5. Score the criteria

Read the narrative and open the evidence, then set your rating — drag the slider, or type the exact value in the box beside it. As you land on a value the sheet tells you which band you've chosen and what it earned.

The screenshot shows a scoring interface for a project titled "San Vicente Handwoven Abaca Slippers". The interface is divided into two main sections: a central scoring area and a right-hand "YOUR SCORING" summary panel.

The panel on the right is your running scoresheet: every criterion, what each one earned, and your weighted total out of 100. Your ratings save as you go — you'll see Saved — so you can leave an entry half-scored and come back to it. A saved draft is not a scoresheet: nothing counts until you submit it.

6. Submit — it locks

Submit scores stays greyed out until every criterion has a rating; a partial sheet can't be cast. When you're ready, you'll be asked to confirm.

7. How finalists are decided

Your total for an entry is one of several. When everyone on the panel has submitted, an entry's scores are averaged across all of you, and that average decides its fate within its bracket:

- It must average at least 80. An entry below that is not eligible to advance, however it placed against the others.
- The rest are ranked by highest average, and the top five in each bracket become the finalists.
- If two entries come out with exactly the same average, they're separated by head-to-head — which of the two more of the panel scored higher. That only ever settles an exact tie; it never overturns a higher average.

Because the ranking is an average, your sheet genuinely moves the result — a single very high or very low rating shifts the entry's average, and an entry can miss the cut on the strength of one panel member's view. Score what you see, and score it consistently across the bracket.

You'll never see the panel's combined tallies yourself, or anyone else's ratings: each assessor's scoring stays independent. An administrator closes the category, the finalists are set, and they go forward to the finals round, where a separate panel of adjudicators ranks them.

That's the full assessor journey: get appointed → read the entry → rate every criterion → submit. For anything else, contact an ATOP administrator.
